

Prior to Hillary Clinton becoming Secretary of State—the Clinton Foundation accepted at least $10 million in donations from the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia. After her appointment at the State Department in 2009, Clinton waived restrictions on selling weapons to those countries that had donated heavily to her family's foundation. Her State Department championed a $29.4 billion sale of F-15 fighter jets to Saudi Arabia in 2011, which are currently being used to decimate Yemen. U.S. dependence on Saudi oil has been superseded by the U.S. dependence on weapons sales.
